Built for organisers.

RollupBandit was created for the golfer who runs the day — the one juggling tee groups, scorecards, side games, payouts and everyone asking who won.

WHY IT EXISTS

RollupBandit grew from a simple, familiar problem: one person always ends up running the golf day. Tee groups change, cards pile up, side games need settling and results still have to be shared afterwards. The organiser should be able to enjoy the golf too — not spend the day chasing cards, calculators and WhatsApp messages.

“

*The aim was simple: make the admin feel calm,
clear and properly organised.*”

RollupBandit was built independently in Kent by Volkan “Volk” Nezir, a software engineer, golfer and member of West Kent Golf Club. It grew from regular golf days where one person ends up sorting tee groups, collecting cards, working out payouts and turning the result into something the whole group can actually read.

Rather than asking every golfer to download another app, RollupBandit keeps the day organiser-led. One person runs the golf; everyone else simply plays.
